Hey Tracey, thanks for the info. I just got off the phone with Steve and got the addresses squared away. Also, I attached the signed letters that went out. Only three are included here because we needed to update addresses, sign and mail the other two out again. I'll send the other two as soon as I have signed copies. The one for the Allegheny County Redevelopment is not an NON, just an IRL. Let me know if you have questions or need additional information. Best regards

Hi Scott,

I just got a call from Steve Hoats, (works for HCP now) who used to work for Phase III when they first got their permit. He said that he received your letter to Bruce Lack at his former address (his ex-wife signed for it). He asked me to let you know. He's not going to forward it to Bruce. I'm not sure what address that is, or if we knew that whatever it is was this guy's former home address.

Can you resend the letter(s) to Bruce Lack to the 1120 Mauch Chunk address?

Hi Scott, can you email us copies of the letters you send out? Just so we know what was sent if we start getting phone calls.

The 3200 Crompond Rd, Yorktown Heights, NY source appears to be owed by Breslin Realty Development Corp. Address (from Google, 500 Old Country Rd, Suite 200, New York, NY

I think the DRP Gibbstown site is Rapauno, former Dupont site – I think Kelly corresponded with Kristen Foldes and Clean Earth extensively about this site. Pretty sure they did not take it.

In 2003, the US EPA Regions II and III established the Stage 1 TMDLs for Zone 2 through 5 of the Delaware Estuary for PCBs. The former DuPont Repauno facility was then identified as one of the largest PCB point sources to the Delaware Estuary. Furthermore, a review of the proposed dredging area adjacent to the shoreline exhibits detectable concentrations of PCBs ranging from < 1ppm to 11 ppm, suggesting that the site may have previously contributed to PCB contamination in the tidal river. Further evidence of a soil based source was provided by DuPont in its 2005 initial Pollution Minimization Plan (PMP) report which indicates soil PCB concentrations ranging into the hundreds of ppm in the area to be redeveloped. A PCB PMP was developed and implemented by DuPont, and then later Chemours, for the Repauno site, including the area to be redeveloped by DRP, which was required by Section 4.30.9 of Commission's Water Quality Regulations. Since the 2005 PMP, under the oversight of NJDEP, Chemours has substantially remediated the site, including removing or capping soil and sediment impacted by PCBs. Based on the characterization of on-site soils, characterization of PCBs in adjacent river sediments was not required by NJDEP.

JSF Henderson Rd, LLC – for some reason we can't find the submittal and I couldn't find any other addresses on the internet. There were other issues with it besides the PCBs, and we did not approve it. That does not mean they did not accept it.
